HELP KEEP BROADWAY CLEAR FOR PARADE

Co-operate With Police Department in Making Welcome Parade a Success—No Parking of Cars Along Line of March—Vehicles Off Broadway.

Everything is in readiness for the big Welcome Home parade Tuesday afternoon, and no efforts are being spared to make it a success. The residents of Kingston can materially assist in making the parade a success by aiding the police in keeping Broadway clear. There will be no parking of automobiles or wagons allowed along the line of march. The trolley cars will stop running when the parade starts and will not lie on the switches.

Local auto owners can help by leaving their cars at home where it is possible to do so. Out of town owners can park their cars in Athletic Field where guards will be furnished by the police department.

Along Broadway and the line of march the entire width of the street is needed for the parade. Residents can help by remaining on the sidewalks and not getting out into the street.

As there will probably be 60,000 people in Kingston Tuesday if the day is fair it is easily seen that every one can not see the parade from the vicinity of the city hall and the armory. As the line of march is over two miles long it is not necessary to crowd to any particular point but one may witness the parade at any point along Broadway.

The space in front of the grand stand occupied by the mothers and fathers of our boys or the high school grounds will be kept clear as well as the space around the Victory Arch. The same applies to the armory.

It is up to every resident of the city to make the day a success by observing the simple rules suggested above.

It's up to you Mr. and Mrs. Reader. Are you going to help?

ATTENTION, MEN OF THE NAVY

The uniform for all sailors in tomorrow's parade will be dress blues, flat hats, peacoats and no leggins. All men in the city and county who have served in the regular navy, the reserve forces, either released or discharged, still in active service or on furlough or stationed here are urged to take part in the parade. The division in which the navy men will march will meet at 1:30 on Ferry street, near the Kingston-Rhinecliff ferry building. Appear there in person and your position will be assigned. It is not necessary that you report to Ensign Roger H. Loughran before that time. If any men have donned "civies" break out your dress blues and help make a good showing for the gobs. First call to quarters at 1.30 o'clock promptly.

Spalt will render the following concert on the [illegible] Redeemer chimes as a fitting introduction to the parade and [illegible] entertainment and inspiration of the paraders as they are [illegible] line in the down town section [illegible] program is as follows:

Two Took Examination.

There was a civil service examination held in the supervisors' room of the court house Saturday, in charge of [illegible] Cullen, examiner for the state civil service commission. Two applicants for the position of junior engineer, industrial [illegible] took the examination.

TWO DECORATIONS THAT ARE UNIQUE

It would be hard to imagine two more widely divergent and unique decorations, prepared for the welcome to our boys, than the two that came to the attention of a Freeman reporter on Sunday afternoon.

One can be seen at the upstairs window of a small house on St. James street, near the trolley switch. In addition to the American flag and "Welcome to Our Boys," the lower casement of the window is covered over with bunting on which one sees first in brightly shining figures the date 1865. Then there hangs the cap of a veteran of the Civil War, and finally in more shining figures the date, 1919. It is the "real thing."

The other decoration was the elaborate and exceedingly artistic window display of the L. B. Van Wagenen Store in honor of the "27th." American flags form the background, whose right-angled sides give the impression of a triangular space. Just under the flag on one side appears in red and black the insignia of the 27th. Against the apex of the triangle on an easel stands an exceedingly handsome white bas-relief of "America's Own," Major General Pershing, over whose head there flies three small silk American flags. In the middle distance of the window are three prize posters; two of the fighting men, mounted against a blood red background, the center poster showing the colors of all of the Allies, well styled "Our Flags," under which appears the motto, "27th, We Salute You," alongside of which is a reproduction of the Statue of Liberty. There are stacked guns with crossed bayonets, a German helmet and belt on whose buckle appears the blasphemy, "Gott Mit Uns!" and several exquisitely illuminated post cards. And giving it the human touch, there stands, clad in khaki, a little lad at "Salute."

"DRESS UP" IS SECOND NATURE

Spring is the Season in Which to Beautify Things From Your Garden to the Raiment You Wear.

Everybody else is thinking "Dress-up" these days. Are you? Better begin to plan your share right now. You can have it all thought out, what your dress-up clothes will be; how you are dressing up your home, your office—your place of business, of course—[illegible] your garden, for the week of [illegible], while you are busy [illegible] week. And you'll find the merchants quite ready to help you out now. Or better still, plan doubly now, everything that you will want or need for your share of dress-up [illegible] day of Dress-up Week [illegible] needs from the splendid [illegible] brand new stocks [illegible] stores in Kingston will carry [illegible] week.

You [illegible] home furnishings, etc., just now in the spring of the year. [illegible] You'll have the time [illegible] and then [illegible] the satisfaction [illegible]

[illegible]

And just remember that our boys now out there have had all of the drab, the scarring, the bloodshed, [illegible] all the [illegible] men and women and children. What they have been [illegible] at home, it has been [illegible]

[illegible] home, [illegible] every [illegible] in Kingston [illegible] whose [illegible] every business section of Kingston, on the [illegible] of Friday, April 4th, at 7.30 o'clock.

FREEMAN OUT EARLY TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The Freeman Tuesday will be printed and ready for delivery to carrier boys at the main office, uptown branch office and the other usual places, at 1:30 o'clock. DEMANDS GROW ON LOCAL RED CROSS

Garments Shipped Recently to European Refugees Total Nearly 6,000 as Result of Noble Work in County.

The Red Cross workers in Kingston city and throughout the county have been quietly doing a vast deal of work this winter, and undoubtedly because of what they have already accomplished the next quota of work will be even greater, for the need for refugee garments seems to grow in seriousness as the Red Cross workers on the other side have an opportunity to investigate conditions. They thought they knew about how bad the state of affairs was, but since the signing of the armistice they are learning more and more of the need for clothing among the destitute folk of war stricken Europe. In many instances, it is stated, clothes are more needed than food.

As a result of the day and night [illegible] on the occasion of pressing need [illegible] work at the work [illegible] Broadway, this city, and [illegible] auxiliaries, the following [illegible] shipped only recently:

MARTIN SABINE FARMHOUSE BURNED

The Martin Sabine farm house, a two story frame structure on the state road at Flatbush, was totally destroyed with its contents Thursday afternoon, March 27, the total loss being said to be over $4,000. Mrs. Sabine with her son-in-law, Sam Astalos and wife, were in Kingston, visiting a dentist when the fire occurred and were informed that the house had burned down on their way home. How the fire started is a mystery. Mr. Astalos lost besides all his household goods and clothing of the family, other than what they were wearing, $250 in Liberty bonds and a number of war savings stamps. The barn was not destroyed. The family has rented a vacant house in the neighborhood and Mr. Astalos will work his 75 acre farm. There was $2,000 insurance on the dwelling.

ULSTER'S 27TH MEN WILL ALL BE HERE

Nearly 70 of Famous Organization to be Met Tuesday by Welcoming Tug at Rhinecliff—Joe Drake and Captain Lockwood Worked Hard for Men's Early Release—Program and Line of March Shows Record Number of Bands and Organizations.

The 27th are coming in full number for the demonstration tomorrow and will arrive by special tug from Rhinecliff just in time to fall in line with their comrades in arms. Mayor Canfield and members of the reception committee will compose the welcome party that will board the tug and go to Rhinecliff to meet the 12 35 train and will be the first to welcome Ulster's own. The men of the 27th will be taken abroad the tug and brought to Kingston and landed at the ferry between 1:00 and 1.30 o'clock. They are to be fed on the train after spending the night in New York quarters provided by the Ulster committee and will be ready to fall in line as the parade starts on its uptown journey. The statement that they will arrive with full ranks is a little misleading at present as one member is confined in the guard house at Camp Merritt for taking "French leave" from camp. This man was confined at the time of the New York welcome for the 27th but was released after Mayor Canfeld offered to serve for him while he participated in the march with his comrades and at present it is undetermined whether the mayor is willing to repeat his sacrifice while this man parades in Kingston. It can not be truthfully said that the mayor made a sacrifice as the man was released without a replacement form the "brig" but this time the officials of Camp Merritt may take the mayor up on his suggestion of serving confinement and we can hardly do without the mayor tomorrow.

That Ulster is able to greet all its heroes from the 27th at this time is in large measure due to the indefatigable efforts of Chairman Drake of the mayor's committee in New York and Captain Fred Lockwood, as is shown by the following letter from Mr. Drake:

Dear Mayor:

The following order will show how the 27th Division boys will be on hand:

Office of the Camp Personnel Adjutant.
Camp Upton, N. Y., March 29, 1919.
Memorandum.

To: 2nd Lieut. John J. Kennedy, 2nd Co., Machine Gun Co., 106th Infantry,
In re Kingston and Ulster County:

108th Infantry men will be available by the ordinary procedure.

105th Infantry men will have to be paid on final statement, and will have to attend insurance talk. Their records will have to be sent to 411 Tenth street tomorrow, Sunday, for checking.

106th and 107th Infantry men will have to attend insurance talks on Monday morning; have their records checked at 411 Tenth street tomorrow, Sunday, and be paid on final settlement.

102nd Ammunition train men, 105th Artillery men, 102nd Supply train men, 102nd Engineers men and 104th Machine Gun Company men will have to be physically examined, attend labor and insurance talks on Monday morning; have their records checked on Monday, and be paid on final statement.

JOSEPH KLAPP NICHOLLS,
Adjutant General,
Camp Personnel Adjutant.

But, my dear mayor, before that order came through, it was necessary for Capt. Fred D. Lockwood and I to go without anything to eat until nearly nine o'clock that night. We waited nearly two hours for 2nd Lieut. Kennedy to put in an appearance to execute the order. Major Nicholls then told us that it looked as though Kennedy would be unable to appear, and stated we could go forth in search of Capt. William J. Coogan, and if we found Captain Coogan to report with him at headquarters at 7:30 p. m. We went forth in the 50-mile-an-hour gale and found Capt. Coogan, and reported as directed. It was then that Capt. Coogan received instructions to execute the order. Early Sunday morning with Lieut. Dittus, they went forth and began turning the wheels. The boys will arrive in your city on Tuesday morning by way of Rhinecliff leaving New York at 9:10 and reaching Rhinecliff at 12.25. On the way up they will be provided with food and under the command of Capt. Coogan, Capt. Fred Snyder and Lieut. Dittus will parade in your city Tuesday afternoon. They will reach New York late Monday night and our committee has provided quarters for the boys on 27th [illegible] and will see that they are well taken care of.

It was a hard job that was assigned us but we are happy to report that we carried your committee's plans into execution. Capt. Lockwood and I went to Camp Upton on Saturday morning and before we had met with [illegible] the last train [illegible] that night had gone. After our efforts had been successful we went in search of a place to sleep only to [illegible] informed [illegible] house was chock full. Capt. [illegible] was told of our plight and [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Capt. Lockwood and [illegible] we would take no "No" for an answer, that Major Nicholls took into [illegible] us the [illegible] of all the wheels. We told him we didn't care if the whole U. S. Army came to a standstill [illegible] boys because the folks back home had planned big things for them. But we [illegible] Captain [illegible]

Captain Munday has visited Kingston and he is well acquainted with Major George F. Chandler. After we got hold of that order we were more than pleased with Major Nicholls, who set the wheels in motion three days ahead of time, and if ever the major visits Kingston and if he is not entertained in the best manner that Kingstonians are capable of, then they should move to some other place, as they will not be worthy to live in the old Colonial town.

Please give us something harder to do next time, and when that job is handed us you can bet a nice red apple that we will be on our way to the tall timbers, and we will delegate the task to some one who knows better how to do it. With my warmest personal regards, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
JOSEPH DRAKE.

WAR TROPHIES OF KINGSTON MEN

On Display In Uptown Store Window Interesting Because of Stories Behind Many of Them.

Not as valuable now as they will be 100 years from now but interesting to look at are the relics of war that are on display in the show window of the S. Cohen clothing store on Wall street. These relics from the battlefields of France were all procured by Kingston boys and each article is marked with the name of the man who procured it making this collection on display of more interest. It is regrettable that the history of each individual relic is withheld from the paper but it would be almost impossible to duplicate the stories from the lips of the men who gathered these remembrances of war for the folks at home. The collection includes German weapons of war and the other side of the story is told by the collection of French implements of modern warfare. Aaron Cohen is desirous of securing more relics for his display and any boy in the city who has a relic from the field of battle is requested to bring it to the Cohen store and have his name inscribed on it for the window display. This collection of Mr. Cohen's is not doubt the largest and most complete of any yet to be gotten together here since the world war. These articles that the boys are showing in the window will all be returned to their owners promptly and with care. Among the articles on display are:

Two maps used by the 301st Tank Corps when it preceded the 27th Division in the advance that broke the Hindenburg Line. These maps were received for the display from Ralph L. Voight.

The entire equipment of Lieut. Robert Keefe and the goggles and moccasins worn by him when he fell 750 feet from his plane near Paris.

A vase made of 77 m. m. shell. This was received from Everett Edwards of Clinton avenue.

A trench hat of a Prussian guard officer from Lieut. Dixon.

A trench helmet worn by a private in the Prussian guard from Roy Markle who is a member of the 51st Pioneer Infantry.

Two arrows that were dropped from a German aeroplane at Toul, France from Charles Longendyke of the 223rd Aero squadron.

A German hand grenade from Edward Reynolds.

A helmet worn by a French private from James B. Loughran.

American trench hat from Bernard Roach.

A German gas mask from Edward Reynolds

A gas mask used by the Foreign Legion regiments in France from Jack Newairk.

A German bayonet from Eugene Carey.

A Belgian sword from Bernard Roach.

American gas mask from Bernard Roach.

French parachute used to illuminate the enemy's lines at night from Edward Reynolds.

Miniature caps made from shells dropped in the Argonne forest, at Verdun and Chateau Thierry.

German shell case picked up in the Toul sector from Eugene Carep.

French hand grenade from Ralph Voight and several articles direct from the front were contributed by James Halliday a member of the famous Rainbow (42nd) division.

POOR SEED OFFERED.

State College Warns of Unreliable Dealers.

The Geneva experiment station has recently found that there is an enormous amount of clover and grass on the New York markets of extremely poor quality, both in vitality and purity. It has likewise found that the firms distributing this character of seed are working under several different names, though presumably the source of the seed is the same in all cases.

The present seed law requires that seeds be inspected and labelled according to the inspections made by the New York agricultural experiment station at Geneva. While the present law is said to be inadequate for the full protection of the farmer, the department at Geneva is able to keep in touch with the seed which is placed on the New York markets.

A representative of the New York State College of Agriculture has just returned from the northwest, where he inspected hardy alfalfa for New York farmers, talked with numerous seed dealers there and had ample opportunity to investigate conditions. He learned quite definitely that New York is considered a dumping ground for poor grass and clover seed. In this connection the college says that New York farmers will do well to purchase seed from reliable dealers only.

"Ford" Goes Coasting.

One of the "Ford" delivery trucks owned by the E. S. Craft and Son, grocery, on Wall street, and driven by Clarence Keyser took advantage of the fine coasting afforded by the snow Friday afternoon and while standing in front of a residence in the middle of the West Chester street hill started down the hill toward the intersection of Broadway. Luckily a large stepping stone blocked its path before it reached Broadway or serious damage might have resulted. The driver as he stopped to deliver his goods left his car, backed to the curb and turned the front wheels up the hill but the strength of the gale that struck Kingston Friday afternoon forced the wheels in the opposite direction and the "flivver" started to coast. The front end of the car including the radiator suffered considerable damage.

Nary a Blush.

Said the facetious feller: "Strange as it may seem there is no blush following financial embarrassment."

HERE AND THERE ABOUT THE TOWN

The Stroller Hears That It Takes a Big Man to Make Even a Ripple in the Waters of Life—Will Parade Tuesday.

"Well did you have any trouble with the new time?" asked the customer, as he watched the busy barber place the finishing touches on the decorations outside the barber shop in preparation for the big Welcome Home Parade.

"Not a bit," replied the barber, "for all I did Saturday night before hopping into bed was to shove the hands of the clock an hour ahead, and when I awoke Sunday it seemed about the same as any other morning."

"I didn't," confessed the customer. "I forgot all about the blame clock, and as a result I was an hour later for everything Sunday until I finally set the clock ahead."

"Come in and set awhile," invited the barber, as he stepped out to the curb to get a better view of the decorations, and then entered the shop.

"Somehow," said the barber, as he struck a match and lighted his pipe, "every time I decorate up it puts me in mind of some people. They think they are the real cheese, and that the old town would not move on unless they had a hand in the pie and were a member of some committee or other, or had something to do with the big time for our boys tomorrow."

"Reminds me of a friend who is dead now. He thought he was it with a capital 'I'. One summer he went away on a vacation for two weeks to Atlantic City and somehow the news did not even slip into the personal column of papers. When he came back he found greatly to his surprise that his friends had not even known he was out of town. That kinder taught him a lesson that no matter how big a man is his absence only makes a slight ripple in the waters of life and he has to be mighty big at that to make even the ripple."

"That's so too," said the customer, as the barber paused. He added, "Are you going to parade?"

"You bet I am," replied the barber. "this old shebang closes prompt at noon that day."

Lake With No Outlet.

Lake Chad, in the heart of East Africa, has no known outlet for the many rivers pouring into it. Its waters rise and fall with great rapidity. The Alexander expedition records that frequently spaces over which they had sailed in the morning had by evening become stretches of dried mud.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

The careful preparation and serving of foodstuffs are coming to be known as worthy of attention and thought.

Beets Piquante.—Wash beets and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and reserve one-half cupful of the water in which the beets were cooked. Plunge into cold water, rub off the skins and cut into cubes. Reheat in the following sauce: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well blended, add the beet liquor, cook until smooth, add one-fourth of a cupful of vinegar and the same of cream, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of red pepper.

Potato Salad.—Mix two cupfuls of chopped cooked potato, add one cupful of chopped celery, one chopped hard-cooked egg and three-fourths of a tablespoonful each of chopped pickle and parsley. Moisten with cream and salad dressing. Heap on a salad dish and surround with crisp lettuce leaves.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes.—Wash and pare six medium-sized sweet potatoes, cook ten minutes in boiling water salted. Drain, cut in halves lengthwise and put into a greased pan. Make a sirup by boiling three minutes one-half cupful of sugar and four tablespoonfuls of water; add a tablespoonful of butter. Brush the potatoes with the sirup and bake 15 minutes, basting twice with the remaining sirup.

Canton Cream.—Soak one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of water and add to a custard made by using two egg yolks one cupful of milk, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar and a dash of salt. Strain and chill in a pan of ice water add a tablespoonful of orange juice, three tablespoonfuls of canton ginger sirup and one-fourth of a cupful of ginger cut in small pieces. When the mixture begins to thicken fold in the whites of the eggs, well beaten, and a cupful of whipped cream.

Previous to that time—from the twelfth to the end of the fifteenth century—pocket mirrors or small hand mirrors, carried at the girdle, were adjuncts to ladies' toilettes. The pocket mirrors consisted of small circular plaques of polished metal fixed in a shallow circular box covered with a lid.

STATE TROOPERS ENFORCING

Law Requiring Light on All Horse-Drawn Vehicles.

A person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed $10."

The state troopers have been instructed to enforce this law and after April 10 will make arrests if the law is not observed.

SONS OF PRESIDENTS.

Political managers are already considering the question of "running" Lieutenant Colonel Roosevelt and the New York mayoralty has been mentioned. If young Mr. Roosevelt should be tempted to enter for that or other high office, his good military record and the prestige of his father's name will at the outset be greater assets than such talents for statesmanship as he may possess. For the present the suggestion is interesting chiefly as a reminder of the fact that the sons of our prominent statesmen have rarely achieved or sought distinction in the same line of effort and that only two American families have had more than one member in the White House.

President John Quincy Adams was the son of President John Adams and President Benjamin Harrison was the grandson of President William Henry Harrison. A son of President Lincoln served as Secretary of War, a son of President Grant received appointment as Ambassador to Austria, and a son of President Garfield was given a Cabinet position by President Roosevelt. This, we believe, exhausts the record. As a rule the sons of our Presidents have either lacked in talent or in desire for a statesman's career, preferring business or the professions. The latest to be conspicuous was Fuel Administrator Garfield. There is no rule without its exceptions, however, and if Lieut.-Col. Roosevelt has in him the elements of a statesman of force, the fact that he is a President's son should be an advantage rather than a handicap.

AMERICAN BOLSHEVISTS.

It is refreshing to hear that the British official attitude toward the outbreak of Bolshevism in Hungary is "marked by calm and unruffled consideration" while attributing the threats of a Red peril "to German and Austrian politicians" who have pitched upon this method of "getting more easy terms." Reflecting observers at a distance have suspected this from the outset, and, now that the club of "Bolshevism" is swung over the heads of the Peace Conference by the thousands of newspaper correspondents at Paris in their daily speculations, it is good to hear of calmness in high places. An unwillingness to be stampeded into hasty action is much needed at a peace conference which faces almost inconceivable difficulties of conflicting interest and battling opinion. Speed is desirable of course, but not ill-considered haste.

European Bolshevism may be a serious matter, but there is no reason why American Bolshevism should scare anybody stiff. It is nothing but an old disease under a new Russian name—anarchy desirous to revolt against established institutions and existing government. Radicals of various brands are seizing upon the new name everywhere because of the prestige given it by the wide sweep of the revolution in Russia. The American "Bolsheviki" are nothing but the same old crowd, extreme Socialists, I. W. W., Anarchists, etc., which we have had with us for many years, and their numbers have not appreciably increased. We hear that there are 6,000 of them in New York city, which has long since had that many radicals of the extreme type. The new bogey is merely the old one under another name.

ENTER THE BLOND VILLAIN.

The notoriety of the "blond beast" of Germany is likely to upset some pretty firmly fixed traditions. The northern nations, predominantly of the blond type themselves, have given their angels and heroines light hair and eyes, while their villains of romance have usually been made dark by contrast. But our subconscious tendency to associate the virtues with the blond type and the vices with the brunette has been rudely checked by the history of the last four and a half years. Formerly the popular fancy in or out of fiction would have pictured a "vampire" as a brunette, but the other day a Newark, N. J., Judge declared a vampire to be "a woman who flirts on the streets with men, bleaches her hair, camouflages her face, disguises herself with clothes and gives wrong names, but is unable to change her eyes or dimples."

Men can protect themselves from street "vampires" by turning away their eyes and walking on, but the Newark Judge, with a view to their greater protection, warns them to be on the lookout for "bleached hair." This is the interesting point, for it makes the vampire a blonde. The "blonde beast" of Germany has brought about many changes, and it begins to look as if one of them is to involve the bringng down of the flaxen-haired angel from her long established pedestal and the substitution in her stead of a beauty with dark eyes and mahogany-colored hair.

Boy Scouts of Kingston.

Monday, March 31, at 7, the Boy Scouts of Kingston will hold the very last drill before the parade of Tuesday. The officers want to hear over 115 answers to the roll call at the time. Your drum corps always has a full attendance at all rehearsals and can now play fairly well. Why can't you have a full attendance for once and learn to march so that you can make the corps of some use. They do not want you to "walk" down the street after them when they can march. They want you to march and march well. How many will we see at the drill? Those who attend are those who think that they are real Scouts and those who want the organization to be something. Those who do not are those who do not care anything for the organization and do not honor the name of a Scout.

All Scouts who intend to march must report to the drill master at headquarters at 12:30 sharp! All who report after 12:30 will be very apt to miss their chances of parading.

Why D. A. R. Will Not March as Unit.

As a patriotic organization, Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., would like very much to accept the invitation extended to it to participate in the celebration parade in honor of our returning soldiers and sailors on Tuesday. On a roll call of the chapter, however, it has been found that so large a majority of the members are working members of the Red Cross, who are entitled to wear the Red Cross uniform, that after such members have joined in with the Red Cross in the parade there will not be a large enough number of D. A. R. members remaining to make up a unit of sufficient size to warrant them in participating as an organization. The Freeman has been asked to make this statement as the chapter regrets its identity in participating in the celebration has to be sacrificed, at the same time recognizing the more than national, the international character of the Red Cross.

GOOD STYLE CALLS FOR ALL-WOOL

You can talk about style all you want to—everbody wants it, of course. But don't forget this for a minute; in order to have good style you must have all-wool fabrics; your clothes wont stay stylish without them; they wont wear. You'll get all-wool here; Hart Schaffner & Marx use nothing else; you'll get style too; the best there is.

What about a spring overcoat?

THERE isn't any garment for men that gives as much all-around service as a light weight overcoat; for cool spring days; for dress; for rainy days; for frosty days in the fall.

The waist-seam overcoat by Hart Schaffner & Marx is one of the best for spring; you see it in the picture; many other good styles too; for every man old or young.

Business suits; new

We're showing some especially good styles for business men; good values too. Models for every figure, large, stout, slender, very short; they're all here.

NOT ALL DISABLED MEN

Eligible For Retraining—Who Can Get Special Training.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 31.—The Federal Board for Vocational Education to-day issued the following statement: "There has been somewhat of a confusion in the public mind relative to the rehabilitation work in general, and a great many applications have been received by this board from men who have received home sort of injury or disability as a result of their service in the army, navy or marine corps, and who think themselves entitled to the retraining which this board administers.

"This free vocational reeducation or special training was designed by the government for cases of the most severe or permanent character. The disabled man in order to be eligible for this retraining and support must first have been discharged from the service. Second, his disability must be such that he has been awarded or is eligible for compensation from the War Risk Insurance Bureau. It was designed by Congress to correct the disability caused by wounds or disease, and to supply the disabled man with means of making a livelihood. This is done by capitalizing his remaining assets, retraining them and making them serve him in place of those qualities or accomplishments which he has lost. Congress delegated this work to the Federal Board for Vocational Education which has headquarters at Washington, and district offices in fourteen different cities in the United States.

"The board desires to assist disabled men in every way, and if there are cases where these men have not obtained compensation, or where their status has not been determined by the War Risk Insurance Bureau, the services of the Federal Board are placed at the disposal of the individual in order to help them find just what their status is.

"When cases have been found to be 'compensable,' the line for which the man desires training is decided upon, he is given a sufficient amount to support him comfortably while studying; an allowance is made to his dependents—more liberal than when he was in active service—and when he has finished and is competent, if it is a wage-earning occupation he has been training for, a position will have been found for him by the placement division of the board."

One member of this commission, Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education for Massachusetts, has already appeared before this club on the occasion of the fall meeting in October. The New York Telephone company has completed arrangements for collecting the tax on certain telephone messages as required by the New Revenue Act, which becomes effective April 1, 1919

The law levies a tax on each message for which the total charge, including overtimes and messenger charge, is 15 cents or more, and directs that the tax be collected from the person paying for the message. The telephone company is held responsible for the collection of the tax, which must be paid in addition to the regular charge for the call.

When the charge is more than 14 cents and not more than 50 cents, the tax is 5 cents. When the charge is more than 50 cents, the tax is 10 cents.

The monthly toll service statements which the telephone company renders to its subscribers, will show the messages on which the tax is imposed, and the amount of such tax, in addition to the regular charges for the toll calls.

On calls from coin box stations on which the tax is levied, the total charges quoted by the operator will include the tax which will be collected in the regular manner, along with the other charges.

MEN HURT AT SLEIGHTSBURGH

Joseph May and Steve Miller, both of Hoboken, were injured Sunday afternoon when the big moving van they were riding in hit the heavy wooden uprights of the ferry landing in Sleightsburgh. Miller has a dislocated hip as well as other minor injuries while May was also badly injured. They were removed to the Kingston City Hospital and today an X-ray was taken to show the extent of their injuries.

The big auto van, loaded with furniture, came down the hill to the landing and a touring car got in the way. In order to avoid hitting the touring car, the driver of the moving van ran too close to the heavy uprights and the two injured men were crushed between the van and the uprights.

One shows the viaduct plan and the other the depressing of Broadway under the railroad tracks. The latter plan is the one that seems to meet with the most approval by those viewing the models.

ANNUAL HIGH SCHOOL MINSTRELS

Approved by Large Audience Friday Despite Bad Weather—Comedians Pulled Some New Stuff.

(Contributed.)

Friday night in the High School auditorium the Athletic Association presented their annual minstrel show for the approval of the public. The decision states that it was the best show of its kind that has ever played in the auditorium. The end-men were very well adapted to their positions and did so with unusual cleverness and wit. They were the only people in the cast that were "blacked up." The circle and chorus made a very appropriate background in their white shirts, "piccadilly" collars, black bow ties, and "nifty" dark colored trousers. In the middle of this group, on an elevated "throne" sat the "dominator" of all, "Mister Interlocutor," Fred Webster. He certainly took his part exceedingly well and acted as if were an every-day occurrence for him to do such a thing. That dress suit gave him the ease and bearing of a lordly gentleman of leisure.

"Itch" Allen and "Bob" Adams, the extreme ends were not present at the opening, but soon afterward a telegram was received saying that owing to the severe storm they had been detained in New York. After the first solo, "The Sun Shines Brighter," by Donald Church, was given, a noise heard in the rear of the room. Then riding gayly down the middle aisles came "Itch" and "Bob" on bicycles. They had on their long dusters and added to this "Itch" had on his aviator's helmet. Both received a hearty welcome at the hands of the other four end men and Mister Interlocutor. Their experiences were soon told to the company, relieveing them of all the worry and uneasiness that they had possessed over the two comedians' non-appearance. "Rip" Meiswinkle then gave his exhibition of singing with the selection called "Listen to His Tale of Woe." It was rendered in a very pleasing manner and received much applause. The next solo was "Oh, You Pretty Doll," and "Ice Wagon" Crane, an end, sang it in an interesting manner, which called forth an encore. His encore brought out the parody of the song written about "Bill" Wilson. Lehner appeared as a Chinaman and sang "Ching Chong." "Bronx" Goldberg sang his song about "Rip Van Winkle" and his experiences, bringing forth two encores. "Bronx" can do most anything now, as we found that he can sing nearly as well as he can play basketball. "Tony" sang of his experiences in going "Over the Top," and was requested to repeat them.

Jim Winters, sang about his "Liza Jane" calling forth much applause because he sang in such a clear distinct way. Glenford Kraus gave the song "Miles of Smiles" in a clever way and his rich deep bass singing was appreciated very much by the audience who drew him back for an encore. "Mickey" the next number was rendered by Winfred Snyder who has a wonderful boy-soprano voice. Carroll Kearney, accompanied by David Schoenfeld on the violin, sang "Some Day" in a wonderful manner. Mr. Schoenfeld played an obligato of his own composition and showed very good skill at the art. The "big hit of the evening" was next in line and as it might be guessed that Allen was the cause. "At the Shim-me-sha-Wabbler's Ball," his selection brought forth four encores. "Itch" was very modest and tried to still the applause, but it was impossible to do so. He sang a parody telling of the dance which followed. His composition of the parody showed unusual ability in that line. The audience were literally "carried off their feet" by his selection. A melody by the six end men followed. This was about the members of the faculty and their different qualities or failings. After two encores, Goldberg delighted the audience by one of his famous "YIDDISHKISATZSKIX" dances. Bob Adams then sang his clever selection, "Can You Tame Wild Women." This was another "big hit" and pleased the audience so much that they called him back twice. His encore was a parody which dealt very jokingly with Mr. Euler and his position in the faculty. Bob and "Itch" sang the clearest and best of the whole "crew" and are certainly wonders at it. Vernon Miller sang "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows which pleased the crowd very much too. A chorus by all, brought an end to Kingston High's biggest and best minstrel show. We hope that many more as good may be staged before the doors of the school are closed forever.

All retired to the gymnasium, where "Curl" Shurter furnished the music for the dancing. A very large crowd partook of this opportunity and enjoyed themselves until twelve when they had to go home. It is needless to say that everyone went home happy and cheerful. Despite the storm the auditorium was crowded and everything was a success.

[illegible]NG OF [illegible]UB FEDERATION

Addressed By Miss Chen, Chinese Vassar Student, On "The Women of China."

There was a fine attendance at the regular quarterly meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs held on Saturday afternoon at the lecture room of the Trinity M. E. Church on Wurts street. The president, Mrs. Hyman Roosa, presided. As is the custom, the business session included brief reports from the various affiliated organizations. Announcement was made of two new individual members, Mrs. M. E. Smith and Mrs. Augustus Guizon. All members of the federation were reminded of the meeting of the Presidents' Council and also that of the Third, Fourth and Fifth District Branches of the State Federation—Kingston is in the Third—on April 22nd, at Oneida.

Following the business part of the program, the meeting was turned over to The Coterie, which was the entertaining club for the afternoon. Mrs. David Terry, president of The Coterie, in behalf of that club, welcomed all present, and introduced the speaker for the afternoon. Miss Chen from China, now one of the two indemnity students at Vassar College. Up to the year 1914, these indemnity students had been entirely boys or youths to be more accurate. Since that time it has been arranged that every two years ten girls, who shall be the highest contestants in the competitive examinations, shall be sent to this country, and Miss Chen came as one of the favored ten, four years ago. The charming young lady was dressed in Chinese costume, which added to her picturesqueness and interest in the eyes of her sisters. Her subject was "The Women of China."

Four Groups of Femininity.

In her introductory remarks, Miss Chen stated that the coming into touch internationally with so much of the outside world, had done a very great deal to modify the life of the women of China today. And the change is so marked and so rapid that she expected to find, on her return after just four years' absence, many changes since the time when she left home.

Miss Chen divided the women of China into four groups—the peasant women, the women in the small trades-peoples' families, the literary women and the women of the aristocratic or nobility rank.

The peasant baby girl—or boy—is carried on the mother's back to the fields or else is left alone at home. Since the women of this class are to work in the fields, they are spared the misery of foot-binding. Besides their work in the fields, they are taught when girls, to spin and weave and to prepare food. If the peasant girl has artistic or idealistic tendencies she is placed as maid in one of the big houses. There, as ladies' maid, she learns to do up the elaborate Chinese women's coiffure and also to make the tiny shoes for her foot-bound superiors. But she is not taught to read or write.

Girls Very Conventional.

The girl in the families of the small trader people, such as tailors, shop-keepers, etc., has greater expectations than her less favored peasant sisters. She is very conventional, with bound feet, etc., but she has the advantage of being permitted to learn to read and write.

Miss Chen said that the literary girl who was fond of culture, books and art was well educated and at present was thought none the less of because of her unbound feet. Her education usually consists of attendance at the primary school, the high school, a normal school and finally some school or college where she will learn English. At twelve years of age she is separated from her brothers and her mother teaches her housekeeping, embroidery, and if she be artistic, poetry and penmanship, of which the Chinese think a great deal. Or she may be taught painting. If she is so fortunate as to become an artist, which she assumes her husband's name socially, she, like many of her American sisters, retains her maiden name in her artistic career.

The women of the nobility are still victims of the bound-feet custom. Their education is quite elaborate and of course exclusive.

Better Living Conditions.

Miss Chen again repeated the statement that international commingling has greatly bettered living conditions for women in China, who after all are not so badly off as many think. The peasant girl is coming to have more and greater opportunities; the girl in the small trades families finds the conventions which formerly bound her almost as tightly as were her feet, greatly modified. The girls now go to the schools almost universally.

Asked about the marriage customs and ceremonies, Miss Chen stated that they were quite similar for the girls of all ranks, except that those in the more favored walks of life had more elaboration of the customs and ceremonies.

While wishing that always the Chinese girls might retain their national characteristic of modesty, Miss Chen stated that she could but wish that they might add to that charm the American girls' activity and faculty of getting there. She found American girls active in everything, and the happier and more useful therefor. Miss Chen's talk was greatly enjoyed by all present, and at the close many questions were asked her. The Coterie was the recipient of a gift of Chinese letter paper from their guest of honor.

Following the address, afternoon tea was served, the pretty tea table decorated with spring flowers, being presided over by Miss Prudhey.

Not only are the styles brand new, but the patterns reflect novel, uncommon effects: lively stripes, neat checks and rich mixtures that will quickly help dispel the war-cloud.

In Defence of the White Ant.

Residents of tropical regions generally look upon the white ant as an unmitigated nuisance, on account of the damage wrought by the insect in all kinds of woodwork. It appears, however, from Sudan Notes and Records, that in the Sudan, at least, white ants serve a useful purpose. Vegetation grows very rapidly during the wet season and the ant only attacks plants that are weakened by drought or disease, and that, but for the activities of the insect, would soon cover the arable parts of the country with an impenetrable mass of vegetable refuse.—Scientific American.

Ancient Heligoland.

Centuries ago Heligoland was at least five times its present size and a place of no little importance. Like so many islands, it had a peculiar attraction for the peoples of the surrounding mainlands. They stood in awe of it, and mythology claimed it for its own. It was here that Forseti, the god of justice, had a temple, as had also, according to another tradition, the goddess Hertha, a special object of veneration among the Angles of the mainland. Later on it was the realm of the [illegible] and Radbod.—Arcadian Recorder.

"TREASURES" IN THE CELLAR

Cleaner Finds Many Things Stored There, With More or Less Interesting History.

Health drive is on this week, and every good Brooklynite will go down in his cellar and clean out all the rubbish and useless stuff except possibly the furnace. When one is engaged in this sort of work he runs across lots of old forgotten stuff.

He unearths crayon portraits of Uncle Hiram and Aunt Maria, made with an air brush in exchange for 400 coupons and $2. They were intended for the parlor, but reached the cellar after throwing the old family canary into convulsions; and there is the wreck of the old whatnot that grandma gave you. It used to stand in the corner of the parlor, filled with old family pictures, sharks' eyes, Indian bead work and other terrible monstrosities that children gazed upon with awe. And as you come across it you remember that the first thing you did after dear grandma passed away was to hustle the whatnot down below, back of a pair of moth-eaten portieres.

And you find your pair of white flannel trousers that you wore to a picnic and sat down in on a blackberry pie. And you recall the trouble and embarrassment you had getting home, and of how, when you had the trousers cleaned, the big stain turned green and the trousers went into the discard. And you run across the first silk hat you ever wore, which made you look like an undertaker, and the vase which you smashed and blamed on the cat, causing an innocent feline to lose a good home; and the tie your wife bought you, on which you deliberately spilled ink, for which no one could blame you.

And so you go along rooting out one old article after another, piling them in heaps to wait for the ashman and the junkman, humming that old hymn, "Sic Transit Gloria Mundi."—Brooklyn Standard Union.

NOT ARDENT WORDS OF LOVE

At First, Though, It Would Seem That Salesman Was Addressing His Adored One.

"No one ever loved you half as well as I do," he said to her.

She made no answer.

"How did you come to love me?" he pleaded. Still the girl refused to speak, although she smiled encouragingly at this.

"Your name is written on my heart. The world is dark without you. I've built a bungalow for you and me. Let us fly to an isle in the tropic sea. The kiss you gave me set my heart on fire."

The girl was not offended. She scowled a little, but not at him. She seemed in deep thought. Suddenly she looked into his pleading orbs.

"No," she said. "Nothing like that."

"My Oola-loola girl. When—"

The girl shook her head and left the counter.

The young salesman had been naming the latest popular songs. Doesn't sound like a national anthem epidemic, does it?

Constructive Criticism.

"What do you understand by constructive criticism?"

"My idea of constructive criticism," replied Senator Sorghum, "is a line of discussions showing why a man ought to vote for me instead of against me."

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

THEODORE PETERSEN,
Sergeant, Med. Det. 101st Field Artillery.

Sergeant Petersen (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Peronne, France, March 5, 1918. Mortally wounded during an enemy bombardment, Sergeant Petersen, though himself too weak to minister to other wounded soldiers, directed his associates in treating the wounded and refused to receive assistance himself until all the others were cared for. When gas shells began to fall in the vicinity he directed the men in adjusting their masks and was the first to test for gas. He continued to supervise the treatment of the wounded, despite the fact that he was suffering great pain, until the arrival of the surgeon, who sent him to the rear. He died on reaching the hospital. His mother, Mrs. N. J. Petersen, lives at 99 Central avenue, Oshkosh, Wis.

Trousers and Knee Breeches.

In a long contest between trousers and knee breeches, the latter won out in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, but retired in the nineteenth. In France sans culottes became a class distinction. In America a republican wore tight pantaloons, a federalist wore knee breeches and buckled shoes. One bride, 100 years ago, attired in fawn-colored silk, walked by her proud husband in what was then the newest fashion—trousers; and his were made from the same piece of fawn-colored silk. In England long after trousers were common the street knee breeches were worn in full dress parties. In 1814 the duke of Wellington presented himself at the door of the ballroom at Almack's, and his entrance was barred by an official who said, "Your Grace cannot be admitted in trousers."

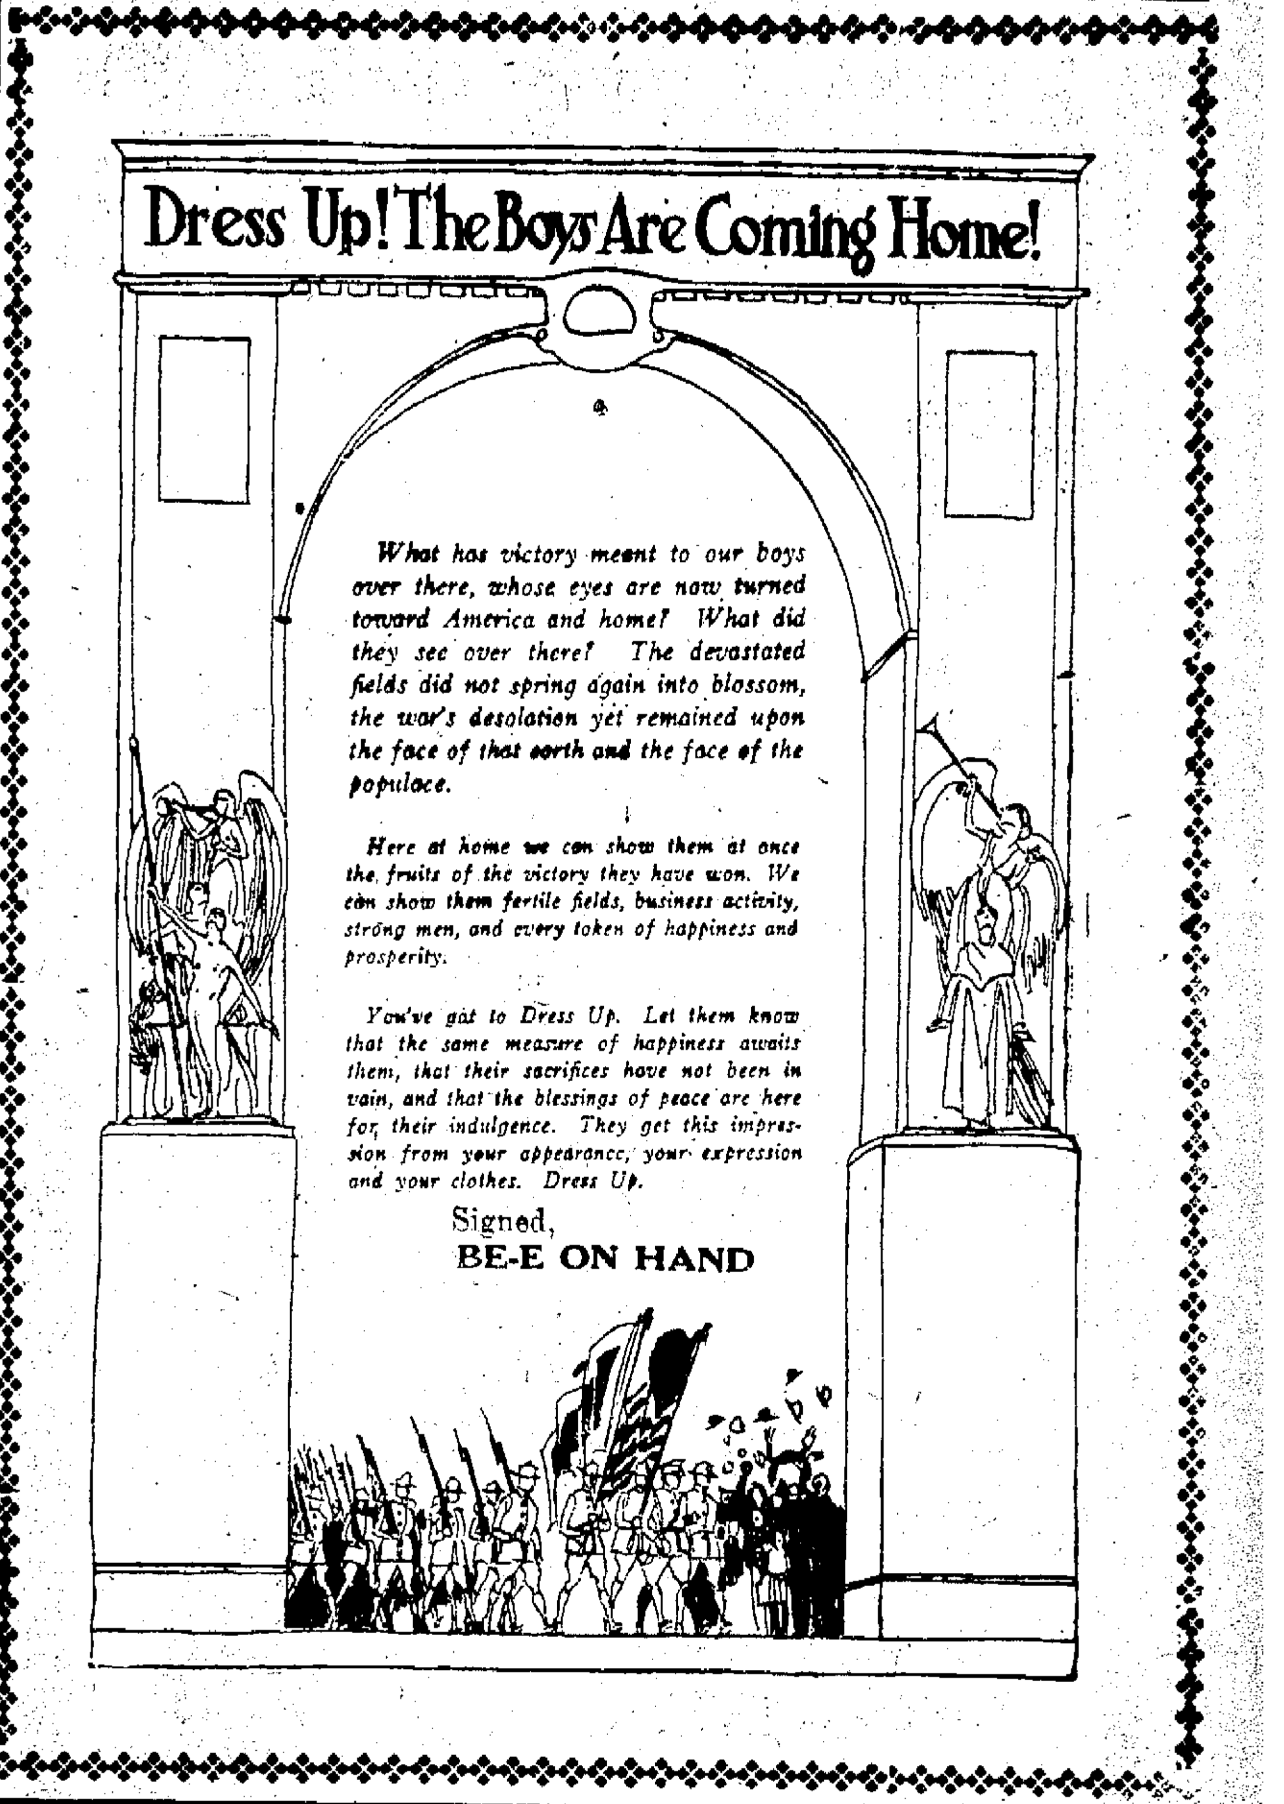
Attentions.

"We are all more or less appreciative of a little notice from the great."

"Sometimes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But just now most of us are perfectly satisfied if we can get a little notice from a salesman in a store."

Skilled in Fine Work.

One of the trades calling for the greatest skill is the making of compasses. This work had never been undertaken by women until dilution of labor became necessary. Of the infinite number of delicate parts demanding absolute accuracy, women have succeeded in making all but two or three and even these will shortly be to their credit.



Dress Up! The Boys Are Coming Home!

What has victory meant to our boys over there, whose eyes are now turned toward America and home? What did they see over there? The devastated fields did not spring again into blossom, the war's desolation yet remained upon the face of that earth and the face of the populace.

Here at home we can show them at once the fruits of the victory they have won. We can show them fertile fields, business activity, strong men, and every token of happiness and prosperity.

You've got to Dress Up. Let them know that the same measure of happiness awaits them, that their sacrifices have not been in vain, and that the blessings of peace are here for their indulgence. They get this impression from your appearance, your expression and your clothes. Dress Up.

Signed,
BE-E ON HAND

Easy Window Washing.

To clean windows simply hold a newspaper under the water faucet long enough to dampen it, crush together and rub on the window pane. The window will be cleaned, washed and dried instantly. Should lint remain brush off with a dry cloth. Cotton gloves may be worn to protect the hands.

Winter Reading.

Books of natural history make the most cheerful winter reading. I read in Audubon with a thrill of delight, when the snow covers the ground, of the magnolia, and the Florida keys, and their warm sea breezes; of the fence rail, and the cotton tree, and the migrations of the rice bird; of the breaking up of winter in Labrador, and the melting of the snow on the forks of the Missouri.—Thoreau.

Be Different.

Try to find a better reason for your acts than "everybody does it." There are follies in dress, absurdities in customs, that are defended on this ground always. The girl who thinks it is proper to dress immodestly because her next-door neighbor does, has a curious code of propriety. Custom does not make a thing right or sensible.—Grit.

WILSON IRRITATED AT PEACE DELAY

Understood To Have Told Other Delegates U. S. Will Make Position Public Unless Agreement Is Reached Soon.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, March 31.—President Wilson, it was understood this afternoon, has told the premiers of England, France and Italy that the United States is ready to make its position public and will do so unless the other powers reach an agreement. The attitude of the president is that America is contending for a peace which will make the world safe for democracy; at the same time pointing out that delays have increased the unrest in certain parts of the world.

President Wilson's insistence for immediate action in the peace conference is being pressed to the utmost. There are already indications of its effectiveness. One of the American peace delegates today said it is undoubtedly true that the unnecessary obstructions and delays may result in the withdrawal of the United States from the conference.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 31.—There were irregular changes in the leading issues at the opening of the stock market today, but another vigorous buying movement started later and before the end of the first fifteen minutes a number of issues were at new high prices for the movement and some stocks established new high records. Corn Products made a new high record, advancing over a point to 60¼. American Can rose over one point to 52 and a number of specialties, including General Motors, also made gains of over one point. Steel Common yielded ⅜ at the opening to 98¾, and then rose to 98¾. The copper stocks were under pressure, with Chile yielding ⅜ to 22⅞ and American Smelting, ⅝ to 68⅞. The oil stocks also were lower, Royal Dutch New York declining 1½ to 87⅞, and Mexican Petroleum yielded from 182 to 181¼. Central Leather rose 1 point to 75⅝.

The reports from Europe about friction at the peace table caused a halt in bullish operations in many of the leading stocks during the forenoon. Steel Common was in unusually large supply, and dropped to 97¾, and losses of about the same amount were suffered in the other steel industrials. American Can was active and strong, moving up to 52⅛ from which it reacted one point. Corn Products, after selling at 60¼, lost all of its gain. Losses of from 2 to 3 points were suffered in many of the specialties, including General Motors and Industrial Alcohol.

The market closed heavy; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds steady.

WAS HIGH SCHOOL DANCE

Open To Those Who Attended Minstrel Show?

I wish to say say a few words through your valuable paper in regard to the minstrels held at the high school Friday evening. I know a couple of respectable young men that attended the minstrels and after they were over went down to the gym to dance but were stopped at the door and asked if they were members of the high school and when they said they were not, they were refused admission. I don't think they should stop any one when they charge a fee and when it's in a building like the high school supported by the public. Thanking you in advance for this space in your paper, I remain,

Respectfully yours,

SOCIETY NOTES.

Court Santa Maria, Daughters of Isabella, held an initiation of a large class of candidates to membership at the K. of C. Home on Sunday afternoon in the presence of a large gathering. The ritual, which was of a religious nature, was very impressive. During the ceremony a vocal solo was admirably rendered by Miss Sarah Humphrey, who sang the Ave Maria from Cavaleria Rusticanna; and Miss Elizabeth, also sang delightfully "Just for Today" by Jane Bingham Abbott. The Daughters of Isabella were very fortunate in having with them the state regent, Mrs. McInerney, who was presented to the Court by District Deputy Mrs. J. M. Leary. Mrs. McInerney gave a very interesting and instructive talk, which the Daughters will long remember. They hope she may be with them soon again. After the ceremony, a salad luncheon was served. The pleasant afternoon was brought to a close with a rising vote of thanks to the lecturer. Miss Kathryn Humphrey. There were present delegates from Catskill, Poughkeepsie and Newburgh.

Lowell Club Banquet.

The Lowell Club held its annual banquet at Hotel Stuyvesant Friday evening and in spite of the near-blizzard the event proved to be one of special enjoyment. Covers were laid for twenty-three guests. The banquet was in charge of the program committee for the year, composed of Mrs. Brigham, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Van Buren and Mrs. Van Leuven, the chairman, Mrs. Brigham presiding during the evening. The table, set in the form of a large cross, was handsomely decorated with pink and white carnations and hyacinths, and flat decorations of ferns. The attractive place cards, bearing on their reverse side, numerous squibs and conundrums, were prepared by Mrs. Van Leuven of the program committee. Mrs. Brigham had requested Mrs. Bell to preside during the evening, but owing to sickness she was unable to be present. Mrs. Van Buren's share of the evening's pleasure, was that of the distribution of favors, camouflaged in white crepe paper which she dispensed from a large basket. They proved to be articles of domestic use, fully appreciated by their recipients, as were the clever accompaning rhymes.

The club has been studying during the past year, "American Possessions," and the toasts of the evening had this in mind. Following the serving of the elaborate and delicious menu, the club members repaired to the private dining room, there to enjoy the merry-making, caused by the conundrums, rhymes, etc., and the toasts, the first of which, "Our Club, Our President and Our Ideals," was appropriately given by Mrs. Witter. There was much of humor in Mrs. Eugeny Deyo's response to the toast, "The Land We Live In," which also included some pertinent and forceful quotations from the words of Abraham Lincoln.

"Bolshevism," was the subject of Mrs. W. N. Fessenden's toast, which, while very brief was emphatically a denial and protest against the abhorred doctrine.

Another appreciated toast, "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle, Is the Hand That Rules the World," was responded to by Mrs. Baragwanath. One of the cleverest toasts of the entire evening was entitled, "The Terminal Facilities," given by Mrs. Arthur Cole, who summed up "Terminal Facilities," as "Knowing When to Stop" and closed her remarks and the toasts for the evening with the recital of "At the End of a Perfect Day." The club had one guest of honor Mrs. Steinert, who during the evening delighted all present with her recitations of "An American Citizen," by Crawford.

EXTRA LEGISLATIVE SESSION POSSIBLE

Or Prolonging of Present One Until May As Result of Assemblyman McGee's Effort to Change Administration of Compensation Law.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, March 31.—Possibility of prolongation of the legislative session into May or the calling of an extra session looms up today with the announcement that Assemblyman McGee will seek introduction of an administration bill to eliminate the direct settlement provision of the workman's compensation law. McGee's intention follows recommendations made to him in a preliminary report by Jeremiah F. Connor, a special commissioner designated by the executive to investigate the state industrial commission. Mr. Connor in his report arraigned this particular provision of the compensation act and charged that injured workmen had been underpaid fully $500,000 because of the provision and that the insurance carriers have collected some $30,000,000 more than they paid in claims.

Mr. Connor further recommended an appropriation of $25,000 for the industrial commission to enable it to investigate and rehear every argument approved since the direct settlement clause became effective.

The governor's program in this respect will undoubtedly be contested by the Republican majority in the legislature and the scheme is expected to give rise to a real legislative fight. Legislative leaders had hoped to dispose of the taxation problem, the one real big issue left, before the end of April but with the injection of this new project, legislators said today that an extra session is not at all improbable.

This week promises to be a busy one in the legislature, although none of the more important legislation will be disposed of. The calendars in both houses are becoming clogged with local bills and an effort will be made to clear the decks for the big problems confronting the lawmakers.

URGE BUILDINGS FOR MEMORIALS

Practical Tribute to Heroes of the Great War.

LIBERTY BONDS TO PAY PRICE

National Bureau of Education Suggests Community Buildings Dedicated to Civic and Social Uses as Constant Reminder of Sacrifices Made by Soldiers and Sailors—Many Communities Favor the Idea.

Soldiers' memorials in the form of community buildings, dedicated to civic and social uses, and, wherever possible, built with bonds of the fifth Liberty loan, are urged by the bureau of education, department of the interior, in a circular sent to every school community in the United States.

A number of communities have already concluded that a building, in constant use as a reminder of the sacrifice made by the soldiers and sailors of the great war, is more appropriate and enduring than the conventional grave-yard monument. "There is a growing conviction," says Dr. Henry E. Jackson, author of the bureau's circular, "that the conventional stone shaft, placed in a grave-yard among the dead, is not a fitting memorial to those who died for freedom. The suggestion, made both in France and America, that these memorials take the form of community buildings, dedicated to civic and social uses, is obviously wise and ought to meet universal approval. On the walls of such a building should hang a bronze tablet containing the names of each community's martyrs to liberty.

The Roll of Honor.

"This type of memorial will guarantee that no boy who gave his life for justice and freedom will be forgotten. The number of American lives lost in this war is very small in comparison to those lost in the Civil war. If a community lost only three or four, it might not think it worth while to build a monument. But a community building is needed entirely apart from its memorial purpose. The chief advantage of this type of memorial, however, is not that it is economical, but that it keeps green an inspiring memory, and it seeks to put into operation, through its civic and social activities, the ideals for which our boys fought in France.

"Funds for this purpose could be raised more easily if they were raised in the form of Liberty bonds during the fifth loan, which is to come in the spring. The bonds can be used as money when the time comes to build. Thus a community can serve itself, while, at the same time, it is rendering a national service. By this method more money for the government could be raised than by any other. Not only would many individuals gladly contribute an extra bond or two for the benefit of their local community, but many who are unable to do this could pool their small gifts and contribute to a bond. Likewise, entertainments and social activities can be utilized to raise money for the same purpose. Opportunity should be given for as many as possible to have a part in the enterprise. For men to contribute outright a few Liberty bonds to a local community cause will help to dispel the delusion that a man is doing anything especially generous when he puts his money into an investment which offers the best security in the world and a fair rate of interest. To couple the fifth loan with free gifts and soldiers' memorials will make it in a real sense a Victory loan. It will be much more than this. It will be a reconstruction loan.

Should Be the School.

"Wherever possible this community memorial building ought to be the public schoolhouse, in order to prevent needless waste through duplication. It is the logical community center. It is nonpartisan, nonsectarian and nonexclusive. It is owned and operated by all the people and therefore furnishes a platform on which all can meet on terms of self-respect. The schoolhouse could be remodeled or enlarged or replaced by a new one. It is the natural capitol and clubhouse of every community. In rural districts small schools should of course be consolidated in order to eliminate a waste and secure a community large enough to support the kind of building here proposed.

"The clubhouse ought to be used for this purpose wherever possible. If in any place the school officials are unprogressive and unawake to their opportunity, then an independent building ought to be erected. Institutions are made for the people, not the people for institutions. Let us use whatever means are available for our purpose. But there is no need for any community to submit to a backward-looking board of school directors. The schools belong to the people and it is their privilege to compel school officials to be their public servants and execute their will."

In his foreword to the bureau's circular, Commissioner Claxton states that the bureau of education will gladly join with other agencies in stimulating the erection of memorials of this kind to American soldiers and sailors.

E. Thornberry, of Sebree, Ky., received by express from Arkansas a hog that weighed more than 700 pounds, and he [illegible] expressage.

GERMANS GIVE UP TO AVERT GREATEST BATTLE

Allies Planned to Deliver Superstroke Against Huns on November 12.

The greatest battle of history was to have started on November 12, 1918.

That was the day set for a superstroke by the allies.

To save themselves a crushing defeat the Germans surrendered—signing the armistice 24 hours before the dreaded blow was to fall.

This is the postwar revelation made by Paris Excelsior, which says:

"While furious fighting was going on in the north of France, the German general staff was preoccupied with its Alsace-Lorraine front. For more than a month they feared a surprise attack in this quarter.

"Through the secret service the Germans learned an important movement was under preparation by the allies on the Lorraine front. The concentration of masses of troops before Briey was reported to them. They learned that 600,000 men under command of Gen. de Castelnau were being got ready to leap forward and carry the war into German soil.

"The allied units were of picked divisions, and the Germans were paralyzed with fear. They were menaced by 3,000 cannons of all caliber along a 70-kilometer front. The allies were ready to sweep a path through the German line with 300 tanks waiting for the word.

"Against this mass of men and material the duke of Wuertemberg had only 25 inferior divisions, amounting to about 160,000 men and less than 1,000 guns.

"The German general staff was fully aware of the gravity of the situation. They understood the aim of the allies first to encircle Metz and then enter Lorraine and finally invade Rhenish Prussia.

"The German forces were disorganized, used up, played out.

"Then they learned November 12 was the day set for the attack. They found this out on November 6. The next day they asked for an armistice—and got it just in time to save their armies from complete disaster."

SEEK MASTODON SKELETON

Portions Have Been Found and Museum Wants a Whole One.

The Spokane museum has leased the 160-acre Coplan ranch near Rosalia, Wash., and within a short time will begin "prospecting" for the complete skeleton of one of the largest mastodons ever unearthed. Parts of the skeleton have been located.

Porter Brothers, local contractors, have been engaged to do the excavation work and are awaiting favorable weather. This was the announcement made by W. S. Lewis, secretary of the museum.

E. A. Lindsley of the Lindsley Brothers company, in the Peyton building, and Porter Brothers will furnish the capital for the excavation work.

The farm, which has a low, boggy soil, has been the source of several mastodon bones unearthed in past years. There are several more skeletons bogged in the place, it is believed, and the one the Spokane museum hopes to recover complete will stand 14 feet high, with tusks extending about 10 feet from the jaws. This will equal in size the largest mastodon ever unearthed, which was found on this same farm in 1878 and now on exhibition in the Academy of Science in Chicago.

WILL SELL SMALL CRAFT

Shipping Board Will Dispose of One Million Tons of Vessels.

The United States shipping board has announced that it will dispose of more than 1,000,000 tons of vessels built to meet the demands of war. The ships to be sold will include 110 wooden vessels, 12 composite ships and many of the small steel cargo craft constructed to help supply the army in France.

The board has planned to employ the funds obtained from the sale for the construction of large steel ships designed for long-voyage hauling, which the American ships will be called upon to perform.

GIRLS HID ON TRANSPORT

Two Found on Troopship Which Brought 18 War Brides.

When the United States transport Louisville arrived at New York city from Brest her officers reported that, in addition to bringing brides of 18 American officers and privates, there were two nineteen-year-old English girls on board who had stowed away in Liverpool and were not discovered until a week later.

Captain Hartley, commander of the Louisville, permitted the stowaways to remain in the cabin they had appropriated and to take their meals with the other women.

Nebraska Led in War Stamp Sales.

The per capita sale of War Savings stamps in Nebraska last year was $21.18 greater than any other state in the country. The aggregate sales in that state aggregated $27,650,000. Ohio, with $56,244,000 total sales, ranked first in volume, but second in per capita sales, which were $16.80.

Bothersome Chinese Tax.

One of the greatest obstacles to commerce in China is the "likin," the internal tax on goods in transit, originating as a war tax during the Taiping rebellion. The "likin" was originally a tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent of the value of the goods when it was first imposed, about 1853, but today its amount is apparently determined arbitrarily by the collector.

MANY SAVED BY "CANNED BLOOD"

One of the Remarkable Developments of Great War.

IS TRIUMPH OF SURGERY

Knowledge Gained by Experience in Other Wars the Basis of Its Use—Work of Medical Men After Battles Shows Wonderful Advanse Made in Science—American Army Surgeons Keep Up With Pace.

The war department authorizes the following statement from the office of the surgeon general:

One of the remarkable developments of war surgery was the use made in the American expeditionary force of "canned blood." The lives of many wounded soldiers were saved through transfusion of blood. "Canned blood" is a colloquialism, for in reality sterile flasks were used to contain tested bloods which were prepared for use in an emergency.

A few years ago treatment by this method would have seemed incredible. Due to the advancement of war surgery, however, many things became possible, and American army surgeons kept the pace. The unadorned story of the development and technique of blood transfusion in the American expeditionary force comes from a medical corps officer of the surgeon general's office, who, for more than a year, was with the American expeditionary force.

Knowledge gained by experience in other wars has shown that of the many causes of death among wounded soldiers there are two which have stood out prominently as heavy factors: Shock and hemorrhage. Shock is a peculiar phenomenon, the exact nature of which has been a mystery. Since the beginning of the war, however, there has been a concentration of effort to solve this mystery, and now, although the true physiological mechanism in the production of shock is not entirely solved, the scientific workers of the allied countries and the United States have gone far in their efforts toward a better understanding of it.

Shock and Hemorrhage.

Shock is characterized principally by loss of body heat, prostration and unconsciousness, a lowered blood pressure and an alteration in the circulation—a stagnation of blood somewhere in the body, most probably in the capillaries. As a matter of fact, for some time medical men have spoken of shock as a condition in which an individual bleeds into his own blood vessels; and, in the sense that there is a loss of blood from the circulation, an analogy does exist between shock and hemorrhage. It has been shown that there are certain predisposing factors in the production of shock, namely, fatigue, hunger, exposure and excitement. Little need be said about the cause of hemorrhage, because every one knows that when wounds are inflicted, bleeding occurs.

Concerning treatment, it is of interest to know that the transfusion of blood is by no means a modern idea, for it was resorted to as early as the fifteenth century. At that time, however, and until very recently, it was a procedure attended with the probability of grave results. Hence it really is perfection of the technique that has made the procedure available for sure and easy use in the army and elsewhere.

For the use of the army medical science offered several different methods of performing a blood transfusion. By the old method, called the "direct," the blood vessels of two individuals are connected by sutures and the blood is allowed to flow from one individual to another. This was improved upon by the use of a specially devised tube to connect the vessels. Any such method, however, has many obvious disadvantages. The element of time, the necessity for great skill on the part of the operators, the possibility of infection and inaccuracy in measuring the quantity infused are some of the prominent difficulties. As a matter of fact, in civil practice, wherein a great deal of blood transfusion work is done, those methods are practically obsolete.

Indirect Methods.

The big step in the development of the procedure for common use came with the introduction of the "indirect" methods. In these, blood from one individual is received in a receptacle and then injected into another individual. The person giving the blood, it may be well to state here, is always called "the donor" and the person receiving it "the recipient."

In these indirect methods a very important consideration is the prevention of coagulation of the blood between the time it is drawn from the "donor" and the time it is infused into "the recipient."

In civil medical practice some men use what is called the "syringe method," in which the blood is removed and injected by means of glass syringes. This procedure requires three persons in order to carry on one transfusion and depends upon the quickness with which they work to avoid the possibility of coagulation of the blood. If pieces of coagulated blood should happen to be injected into any individual some small vessel in the body probably would become plugged, the damage resulting there from depending upon the location of the obstructed artery. Another method eliminates the possibility of coagulation by receiving the blood of "the donor" in a solution of some substance known to prevent coagulation.

With the foregoing facts in view, the medical men who were with the American expeditionary forces decided that whatever method was adopted it would have to be one as simple as might be and which could be taught and learned in a very short time, yet one as faultless as possible. The indirect method, using sodium citrate to prevent coagulation, was decided upon. Also a type of apparatus was devised to serve as a model for the standard outfit. This apparatus was made of glass bottles, glass tubing, rubber stoppers and rubber tubing. Very little skilled work was required in preparing a large number of the sets. At the central medical laboratory the outfits were prepared and put up in carrying cases. Every officer who took the course of instruction there was sent out with a set ready for use. In blood transfusion, besides the danger of coagulation, there are other equally important conditions that may be harmful and must be taken into consideration Of these, two are of principal importance.

First, there is the danger of the transmission of disease through the medium of the transfused blood. An individual who is suffering from such a disease, of which malaria and syphilis are examples, must never be used as a donor.

Second, there is the possible biological incompatibility between two bloods.

How It Is Done.

In order to see the machinery in operation, let us say that a man in a condition of shock is brought into an evacuation hospital near the battle line. He is unconscious, cold, has a low blood pressure, and has suffered considerable blood loss before the flow had been stopped at the advance post. He is put in a special shock ward and on a special shock bed. The ward is warm quiet, restful and well ventilated. As for the bed, that accentuates these conditions. Over it is extended a frame supporting the bedclothes in a manner that reminds one of a prairie schooner. An alcohol stove, placed upon the floor at the foot of the bed, delivers the heat into the "schooner" by means of a conducting pipe and a fenestra. The man lies under the covers with only his face exposed. It is deemed best to perform a blood transfusion upon the patient. A few drops of his blood are procured, and, by means of known serums, the blood group to which he belongs is determined. A glance at the list of donors and one is chosen who belongs to the same group. Blood is drawn from the donor into a receptacle containing sterile sodium citrate in the right proportion and this blood is injected into the wounded man.

To depart from the specific example, occasionally the blood was stored on ice for several days and then used, perhaps at the firing line. Such cases were relatively few, however. More often, if donors for almost immediate use could not be procured or were not to be had in sufficient number, a condition that arises during big attacks, certain fluid substitutes for blood were employed. As in the case of anticoaguiants, there are many such fluids. Of course any blood substitute must be harmless to tissues and red cells alike. The old standard fluid substitute, which met these requirements, was sterile normal salt solution, and, although the immediate effect of intravenous saline is equivalent sometimes to even blood transfusion, the benefit is usually lost in a short time and an opposite, deleterious effect is produced. This result, it was found, could be avoided and a relatively permanent effect secured by the use of a fluid of the same physical properties as blood.

MINES ENDANGER OCEAN VESSELS

High Explosives Still Float in Lanes of Commerce.

NAVIES TO SWEEP THE SEAS

Known Fields Will Be Cleared and Derelicts Will Be Picked Up—Danger May Extend for Years, and Mines, Freed From Moorings, May Be Swept Miles by Ocean Currents—Many Ships Sunk.

Untold thousands of unexploded mines, planted in navigable waters during the four years of war, still linger in the lanes of commerce like seeds of death, a constant menace to the toilers of the deep. Weeks back the sting of the U-boat was drawn. The signing of the armistice halted further ravaging of the submarine, and shipping sailed forth no longer in dread of the torpedo or the guns of the undersea craft. Nevertheless ships are endangered by other marine agencies of death, and the mariner cannot be sure that these hazards won't lie in his path for months to come and do him harm when and where least expected.

Already the navies of the allied nations have undertaken the hazardous work of clearing the recognized mine fields in European waters, and by the use of wire drags propose to remove every mine that still is held in position by its moorings. The chief danger to the mine sweepers and to commerce in general lies, however, in the derelict mine, which has been washed from its original position and is likely to be found in the North sea, in the Gulf stream, on the shores of the United States or in any other location to which the current, tide or winds may drive the mine with its charge of T N T, which is notably inert to the action of water and will retain its destructive potentialities until the charge is exploded.

Many Ships Sunk by Mines.

Early in December the British warship Cassandra struck a mine in the Baltic and went down with the loss of 11 men. In January a British freighter foundered off Middlesborough after hitting a mine and her crew was lost. A few days later the French ship Chaouia stumbled upon a mine in the Straits of Messina and went to the bottom in four minutes. Four hundred and sixty persons on board were lost. The British sloop Penarth was sunk by a mine 23 miles from the mouth of the Tyne. Scarcely a day passes, in fact, that some British, Norwegian, Swedish or other craft is not sunk or crippled by a mine in the North sea. Navigation has become so hazardous that many craft proceed only by day, thus lessening the danger of coming into contact with the dreaded derelicts.

Official figures issued by the Dutch and Danish authorities give some idea of the number of mines that have been torn from their moorings during the recent war. At the close of the first two years of war more than 500 mines had been beached along the north coast of Jutland. By March 1, 1916, 918 mines had been washed upon the shores of Holland. From 1914 to 1918, the Dutch picked up along the short seacoast of the Netherlands no fewer than 6,050 contact mines.

The belligerents were not the only European nations which employed mines. The Dutch, the Danes, the Norwegians and the Swedes all planted defensive mine fields, and upon numerous occasions these weapons got adrift and added to the perils of shipping.

Sweeping the Seas for Mines.

During the war mine sweepers were constantly at work. Great Britain had no fewer than 700 craft to do this work around the British isles alone. Each month the mine sweepers combed 400,000 square miles of the sea, and to accomplish this they steamed more than 1,250,000 miles. In 1917 they garnered 43,000 German mines. In 1918 up to October 1 they had harvested 14,000 mines. In this hazardous work more than 130 British sweepers were blown to atoms and their crews lost.

Now all the allies are preparing to sweep the planted areas in an effort to gather up every possible mine. In some sections the removal of mines has begun. In other areas the fields will not be touched until after the signing of peace terms. The task before the nations is to sweep the seas free of the vast army of submarine weapons, and do it, despite the hazards involved, with the least possible delay. But no matter how rapidly this work may be prosecuted there still remains the disquieting likelihood of a considerable percentage of these mines breaking loose or being carried, anchor and all, into areas remote from their original position.

DROP 31,000 BOMBS ON U-BOAT LAIRS

Wonderful Work of British and American Aviators During the War.

More than a thousand tons of explosive, 31,000 bombs in all, were dropped by British and American aviators upon the lairs of German submarine and destroyer flotillas at Ostend, Bruges and Zeebrugge during the war, according to figures recently made public in London.

The enormity of this work of assailing the raiders of French and English coast points may be comprehended when it is realized that it would require 25 freight cars loaded to capacity to transport such an enormous quantity of explosives.

In addition the aviation squadrons, which were located at Dover and Dunkirk, made almost daily raids on the German airdrome near Ghent and Bruges. The British flyers also acted as a shield against air raids on England and spent much time on submarine patrol work.

Before the historic raids on Ostend and Zeebrugge by the naval forces operating from Dover, a vast amount of preliminary photographic work and bombing was carried out by the Dover and Dunkirk squadrons.

The most powerful of the German antiaircraft defenses were located on the Belgian coast, some of the batteries comprising eight-inch guns. Their famous Westende gun could throw a shell up to 22,000 feet in the air. At Bruges the Germans concentrated more than 50 searchlights of great power, 50 antiaircraft guns and about 40 kite balloons equipped with nets, besides innumerable machine guns and tracer pom-pom guns.

AIRPLANES FOR POLICE

May Be Added to the Service in the Northwest.

Airplanes will almost certainly be added to the equipment of the Canadian Northwest mounted police, for its far northern patrols. The question is under consideration. Many of the force who went overseas joined the flying corps and are competent aviators. They are now coming back to their erstwhile positions.

The present system of patrols is not only hazardous but very much dependent on weather conditions. Herschel can be reached only by water, and there are many difficulties as to provisioning for trips.

Airplanes not only would permit the patrols to be made in a fraction of the time but the service would not meet with any physical handicaps encountered on land. It is more than probable that an air squad will be added to the force.

MUST GIVE UP BIG GUN

Germany Ordered to Surrender Seventy-Five-Mile Cannon.

Since the signing of the armistice little has been discovered regarding the fate of these weapons. Recent reports were to the effect that one had been dismantled in West Prussia.
